Message From the President

Dear All

Warm greetings to the readers of the BELTA Newsletter! We are pleased to share with you the June 2021 issue of the newsletter. Although the COVID-19 pandemic has disrupted the flow of education, it is heartening to know that we have been able to keep education going and the activities of the association moving amidst the crises. The crises triggered by COVID-19 have also created opportunities and despite the setbacks we have moved forward and achieved goals. The pandemic has created new ways of interaction amongst teachers and students and colleagues! We have also moved beyond borders and connected, attended and presented at various International forums and conferences. We are proud to announce that the regular activities of our association did not come to a standstill and we held virtual conferences, teacher development webinars, our flagship THT teacher educator programme, panel discussions and AGM. Since face to face interactions were not allowed we moved our professional development programmes online!

Our E-newsletter, does a great job by keeping the association members updated on relevant news, events and at the same time provides them a platform to share their views and showcase their achievements. In times of social distancing, our newsletter keeps the BELTA community informed and engaged. I would also like to take this opportunity to thank the contributors of the newsletter and the Publications Secretary and her team for their constant support in making this E-newsletter a success.

Happy Reading!

Dr. Rubina Khan

DU Research Team Presents at the 9th BELTA International (Virtual) Conference 2021
A research team, from the Department of English, University of Dhaka, comprising BELTA president Prof. Rubina Khan, EC member Mr. Ahmed Bashir and life members Dr. Bijoy Lal Basu and Mr. Md. Elias Uddin gave a talk at the 9th BELTA International (Virtual) Conference 2021 held on 6 March 2021. The talk was delivered by Mr. Ahmed Bashir and Dr. Bijoy Lal Basu on behalf of the team. The theme of the conference was “Education during the Pandemic: Learning amid crisis and emerging opportunities”. The title of the talk was ‘Innocence to Experience: Teacher attitudes to online instruction’. The team shared some preliminary findings from their collaborative research that explored tertiary level English teachers’ attitudes towards online teaching during the COVID-19 pandemic, and any changes in their attitudes over time. The presenters discussed the major findings of the longitudinal study which include teachers’ attitudinal change in affective, cognitive and psychomotor domains.

“Stories About Ourselves” Project Update
“Slow and steady wins the race” describes the progress of the “Stories About Ourselves” materials development project since its arrival on the world wide web last year. The project, which is a collaboration between BELTA and THT (“Teachers Helping Teachers”) Japan, provides free graded reading materials with a Bangladeshi focus for English learners at all ability levels.

After the initial writer training workshop in 2018, the BELTA sponsored site was born in 2020, and now provides over forty stories, non-fiction texts and poems, all written by Bangladeshi writers. Each is carefully edited for accuracy, high frequency vocabulary use, and learner interest. Illustrations and photographs are then added, along with stimulating learning activities based on Bloom’s revised taxonomy of cognitive skills. This approach enables learners to develop critical thinking skills while simultaneously building comprehension. New reading texts are being added regularly, as writers contribute these, and the quantity of materials is growing steadily.

BELTA Webinar Series-8 entitled, “New Spaces in Language Education: challenges for theory and practice”, was organized by the BELTA Professional Development Committee on March 27, 2021. It was facilitated by Dr. Cecilia Silva, Associate Professor, Tohoku University, Japan. Dr. Silva shared her experience as a language educator during COVID-19 pandemic with an emphasis to her discovery of online teaching as a unique methodology. She claimed that success of such methodology not only depends on the content dissemination and the technological expertise of the teacher but the power positive attitude on the part of the teacher and independent learning on the part of the students are also required. She found the “Mediation tools and Students’ IT Learning Paradigms” (Kemmis et al, 1977) very helpful in her mediating teaching. She talked about four paradigms that she applied in her online language classroom: i) Instructional paradigm, ii) Revelatory paradigm, iii) Conjectural paradigm, and iv) Emancipatory paradigm. She also shared the experience of her students’ intercultural telecollaboration and how successfully she has utilized artifacts and cultural practices in her class. She also demonstrated some language activities based on the stories of the renowned Bangladeshi writers, Tanvir Malik and Selina Hossain. The webinar was moderated by Dr. Rubina Khan, President, BELTA and reviewed by Dr. Shaila Sultana, Convener, BELTA PD Committee, for 49 participants.

Recent Publications by BELTANs

Research on Online Education in Bangladesh during COVID-19

A research article by a Dhaka University English Department research team led by BELTA President Dr. Rubina Khan has been published in Volume 25, Number 1 (May 2021 Issue) of TESL-EJ (Teaching English as a Second Language Electronic Journal). This is the second of a series of papers to be published based on a collaborative research project on online instruction at public universities in Bangladesh during COVID-19. The other members of the research cohort are BELTA EC member Ahmed Bashir and life-time members Dr. Bijoy Lal Basu and Md. Elias Uddin. This study investigated the perceptions of teachers and students of public universities, and examined their views of online pedagogy, assessment and the major challenges faced. Initial insights highlight the need for supporting the disadvantaged students as well as training teachers to use appropriate tools and techniques for teaching and assessing online.

To read the article, please visit the link http://www.tesl-ej.org/wordpress/.

A third article in the COVID-19 education series has been published by the same research team in Volume 11, Number 1 (June 2021) of Indonesian Journal of Applied Linguistics. The title of the paper is “Transitioning to online education in English Departments in Bangladesh: Learner perspectives.”

Recent Publication on Language Testing

This research study investigates testing practices of English at the secondary school level in Bangladesh and how it impacts on test takers and on education in general. It focuses on test specifications, test items, and its alignment to curriculum objectives. The insights drawn from the study discuss the significance of the washback effect and the impact of testing and the crucial need to develop assessment literacy among teachers, test-setters and scorers.

Research on Equity and Social Justice published

This paper presents a rationale for ELT educators for promoting equity and social justice in a changing world where shifting roles and responsibilities of the education workforce is becoming a crucial issue. Based on an increasing interest in intercultural understanding, cooperation and reconciliation, the writer investigates pathways through which ELT actors may become agents to challenge dominant narratives, foster criticality, and develop a shared vision to facilitate a similar sense of social justice and equity in learners.

Recent Article on "Grassroots English and Bangladeshi Economic Migration to the Middle East"

Dr Qumrul Hasan Chowdhury (Department of English, University of Dhaka) has recently published a chapter with Professor Elizabeth J. Erling (University of Vienna) titled ‘The value of grassroots English for Bangladeshi migrants to the Middle East’ in the book World Englishes at the Grassroots, edited by Christiane Meierkord and Edgar W. Schneider and published by Edinburgh University Press, UK.

The chapter, based on a research in rural Bangladesh, investigates the value of grassroots English for the Bangladeshi migrant workers in the Middle East, and sheds light on several relevant methodological issues. It shows that English has some functional values for the Bangladeshi migrant workers, but structural complexities and global inequality considerably condition those values. It gives direction that ‘a critical and holistic approach informed by individual biographies of migrant workers and structural and contextual factors of migration’ (p. 182) can benefit future scholarship in this area.

Publication of Challenges in Academic Writing: A Pragmatic Study

BELTA Publications Secretary Ms. Rabeya Binte Habib has co-authored a book titled Challenges in Academic Writing: A Pragmatic Study with Professor Dr Jaya Karthikeyan from Vellore Institute of Technology, India. The book has been published by Royal Book Publishing, India. The objective of this book was to identify common mistakes made by 250 scholars and 300 teachers, who are non-native English users and currently affiliated to a technical institution, while writing research papers, research proposals and research articles as a part of academic research.

A thorough analysis of the collected data revealed that these teachers and scholars are in need of rigorous training in functional English with emphasis on subject-verb agreement, tenses, punctuation, singular-plural, sentence structure and vocabulary. The study was conducted by Full Time Research Scholars of VIT, Vellore, under the joint supervision and guidance of
Dr. J. Karthikeyan and Assistant Professor Rabeya Binte Habib, Daffodil International University. The findings of individual scholars are published as chapters in this book which makes this book as a major resource for researches in academic and research writing.

The South Asian Regional Online Conference

Representing Bangladesh in The South Asian Regional Online Conference on “Critical Thinking in English Language Teaching” held from the 20th to 25th February, 2021, was a unique experience for me as an English language teacher. The most attractive part of this conference was the opportunity to work under the direct supervision of Bruce Rubin, a renowned ELT Specialist of the U.S. Department of State. My presentation entitled, “Culture-Based Graded Reading Material in Enhancing Critical Thinking Skills in an Online Classroom” held on 23rd February, was attended by more than 750 participants in the zoom platform and around 240 participants in the Facebook live.

I demonstrated a number of critical thinking activities performed by my students in an online EFL classroom in response to the fiction, nonfiction and poetry published in “Stories About Ourselves”, a collaborative project by BELTA and THT. My presentation was appreciated for my creation of the Moodle repository of the course in DIUBLC, my creative writings, my rapport with my students and my story telling ability.

Teaching Essential Word Structures

A language facilitator must familiarize the learners with the way the words are built. This not only will assist them to pronounce and spell better but also will enhance their critical thinking abilities. In English language, there exist two such basic structures. In the first one, adding mechanisms take place. For example, a new word is formed by adding two existing words, e.g. bitter + sweet = bitter-sweet, etc. or by adding grammatical particles with an existing word, e.g. take + -ing = taking, etc. This can often change the parts of speech. In the second one, words can have additional mechanisms such as change of one or two sound(s), e.g. thief-> thieves, etc. or repetitions, e.g. yum-yum, etc. or short forms, e.g. gymnasium -> gym, etc. Words can show both the mechanisms simultaneously. If the learners can analyze words followed by these basic mechanisms, they might be able to grasp new words quickly.

Critical Thinking in ESL Teaching

Too often, critical thinking is confused for application-based learning or as a tool to critic or question authority. The reality is, it empowers teachers to tailor curriculums that meet the learners’ needs. In order to incorporate critical thinking, firstly, the students must identify and communicate their purpose for learning, which could range from wanting to speak fluently to getting a targeted grade. This will establish the intent as well as give the teacher the foundation to tailor the curriculum. Secondly, the student must be presented with expected outcomes based on prior assessments or progressive growths. This is to provide a realistic road map for the student without them feeling overwhelmed or having to feel inadequate when comparing to others around them. Lastly, a thorough and judgement-free discussion can be held concerning the student’s academic and social motivators. This is vital to ensure long-term engagement and information retention.
